This statement was made by Marion Kent of the NASA director's office in Huntsville, Ala., Friday to a group of community leaders gathered at the MTO Gainesville site so they may prepare themselves for a greater influx of residents.

Capt. William C. Fortune, site nanager, said the anticipated acceleration is due to setbacks in construction at the missile testing facility and a desire to get back on the original schedule.

Kent said it is possible there will be more than the originally anticipated 2,700 permanent personnel or that the original numbers will come to the site sooner than scheduled, or both.

Kent cited there are about 2.399 construction workers employed at the site by contractors which are considered as temporary and eventually will move out as the work is completed. He noted they do not represent any major concern for chool and civic leaders.

Kent presented current figures as to MTO permanent personnel who are living in surrounding communities within the impact area. He said there are 132 in Bay St. Louis, 38 in Gulfport, 57 in Long Beach 158 in Pass Christian, 276 in Picayune, 90 in Slidell, 23 in Waveland, 113 in other Mississippi cities and 25 in other Louisiana
